Books and life have structural similarities.

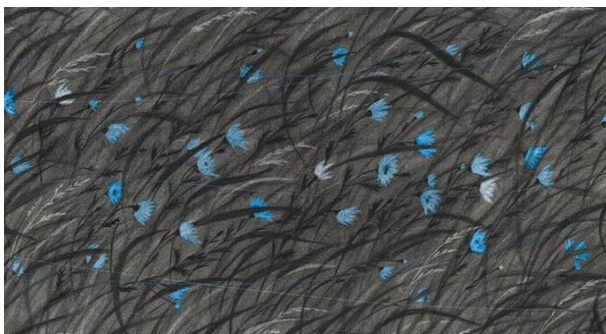

As if pages repeat and then a book ends, life ends after repeating days. Inspired by this, the author worked this picture book about a bizarre door which has only an entrance, no exit repeating with endless.

There are three sisters standing in front of the door and keep trying to open it.

How could they make it?

You can find who drew a line on the door whenever she opened it, which represents repetitive days.

The overlapped lines turned out colours, and they went beyond the door.
