This story starts with a strange monster who abruptly appeared and took a girl's blanket before going to bed. She is never unwilling to take a step forwards a veiled world filled with a number of monsters speaking their own languages like Kuaaang, Huchuchup, Upupa and so on. She jumps on wobbly water, dangles from the edge of blanket, slides down through winding tubes, and hold a parade with friendly monsters. On her way to follow her blanket, she learns to mingle with them by making her own language, Kiyakong!

You will love its vivid colours looking outside the box – pink for girls, black for scary monsters.

Author Biography:

Eun-ah Hwang studied Design and Illustration in South Korea and the United Kingdom. With her draft idea of various characteristic monsters and a girl following them, she was named winner of the 2018 International Award for Illustration at Bologna Children's Book Fair, which has been released this picture book <Hello, Kiyakong>.

She tries to find any hidden stories in ordinary days, and wants to move forward with them.
