Grandma Ae-sun starts her day by talking to her home appliances and appreciating their being. Those are the only names she ever speaks out during the day. One day, she keeps quiet. Magically, the home appliances make noise to draw attention from neighbors.

In the book, Ae-sun says 'Perfect now' twice. Once being alone at the dark home and looking desperate and the other time with someone else outside looking at the flawless blue sky. The same phrase 'Perfect now' leaves different impressions in different surroundings. It's about the courage to face fear and take just one more step forward
