No one can't stop us!

Baby greens in this cheerful farmer's field have grown up with loads of love and rhythm.

This illustrated children's book shows an old farmer's plentiful love for his baby greens.

The old farmer loved baby greens so much that he would like to support their future goals to be tomato ketchup, salad, and vegetable dishes. However, due to the severe drought, baby greens got exhausted. The old farmer took water from the river and moisten sandy soil. Thanks to farmer's help, baby greens grew into great greenery and finally became wonderful dishes providing little kids with nutrition just as their dad did. Kids can learn about farmer's mind, circle of life, and gratitude for food.

Author Biography

Min-kyung Hyun has been working as an author/illustrator.

When she visited to her grandparents in her childhood, her grandfather slipped sweets into her hands, which must have been his piece d'occasion. She could feel his love with the sweets and enjoyed the moment.
